Dear Parents & Carers

Russia's invasion of Ukraine: information and support pack

Dear parents and carers,

Many of us are anxious and upset about the news unfolding about the conflict between Russia and Ukraine. Even if you are not directly affected, watching these events can be upsetting. Your child may not be watching the news, but they may still hear about these events in other ways, and this may cause anxiety for them too.

During this difficult time, I wanted to reach out to let you know what we are doing in school to support your child, and offer you guidance on how you can support them too. We have already sent out much information and guidance so please keep checking for updates.

We have given all of our school staff guidance on how to talk to children about the events in an age-appropriate and sensitive way. We have included some of these tips in this pack to help you handle any conversations you might have at home with your child.

We know that highly emotive and stressful events such as those happening in Ukraine can make emotions run high, and that can lead some to say or do hurtful things. In school, we continue to promote our school values and ethos of being a kind school. We have also included in this pack some guidance around how you can help tackle hurtful comments, in case it is useful to you.

If you have any questions, concerns about how your child is coping or you need any other support from the school, please let us know by emailing the school office. We are here for you.

We hope you find this information helpful.

Yours sincerely

Mrs E Walford
Headteacher

How to talk to your child about what is happening

No matter how calmly you manage the current environment, children are likely to be anxious. They will pick up bits of information from their friends, from the news and from listening to adults talking around them – but they can misunderstand what they are hearing. It is important to talk to them about what's happening.

Start by finding out what your child knows already

Use open-ended questions to give them the chance to tell you what they think. See page 7 of the resource 'worrying about war' for examples of questions to ask (you will find the resource at the bottom of the page.)

Tackle the news head-on and talk about it openly and calmly

Use real words and do not shy away from the truth. Be prepared to explain and define keywords they might be hearing to help them make sense of what is going on. For example, words like invasion, missiles, sanctions, refugees etc. Use age-appropriate material such as this Newsround resource, which includes definitions.

Stick to the facts

But do not discuss everything you hear. For example, be careful about talking about speculation around nuclear warfare. Reassure them that the chance of 'World War III' breaking out is highly unlikely.

Educate them about reliable sources of information

Explain how some stories on social media may be based on rumours or inaccurate information.

Use reliable news sources like Newsround, which is age-appropriate. Watch and discuss with your child this Newsround video on spotting fake news about the crisis in Ukraine.

Encourage your child to ask questions and share their feelings

Remember, it is okay not to have all the answers. Tell them that you will let them know when you know more. This will be an ongoing discussion.

Allow for repetition, you might have to answer the same thing again. Younger children in particular tend to repeat themselves when they are feeling uncertain or worried.

Reassure them that they are not the only ones feeling this way and encourage them to share their feelings with you or their teacher.

Be a role model

Recognise and manage your own worries first. If you notice you are feeling anxious, take some time to calm down before you decide to talk about the events with your child.

Be open about sharing your feelings with your child – e.g. I'm also finding the news a bit worrying, so I'm doing X (baking cakes, going on long walks, swimming etc.), which helps me to relax.

Encourage them to think about what they can do to relax.

Reassure them and let them know it is normal to be concerned

Explain that we are not at war with Russia and that they do not need to worry about it happening in their neighbourhood. Reassure them they are safe and that the UK is taking steps to help the people of Ukraine.

Encourage them to take breaks from listening to or reading the news – overexposure is not helpful.

Do something positive with your child

Organise an aid package to send to Ukraine. For example, research local groups that are organising aid packages and contribute to these with your child.

Alternatively, take a look at this article, which includes different ways you can help.

If your child struggles with higher levels of anxiety

Some children are naturally more anxious, such as those with existing phobias or obsessive-compulsive disorders. The current situation can make those anxieties worse. If you have relatives in the armed forces or in the regions (Ukraine, Russia, eastern/central Europe), your child might be susceptible to higher levels of anxiety.

- Get them to do activities such as counting, ordering and sorting tasks, which can help them calm down
- Encourage them to use relaxation techniques such as controlled breathing
- Help them stick to routines they know
- Look out for obsessive or compulsive behaviours and try to get ahead of them early by challenging unhelpful thoughts and assumptions
- If you are worried about your child's anxiety, YoungMinds is a charity dedicated to children's mental health. They have a parents' helpline for confidential, expert advice. You can reach them at 0808 802 5544

Help us tackle racism and bullying related to the events

We are a kind school and want to maintain these values during this difficult time.

If you hear your child saying or doing hurtful things linked to the events happening in Ukraine, such as generalising that all Russians are bad and want a war, you can use the following examples to help dispel such misconceptions:

- Explain that the decision to invade Ukraine was made by the Russian government and its leader, Vladimir Putin, not the Russian people. People do not always agree with the things their governments do
- Explain that the vast majority of people that live in Russia:
 - Want peace with Ukraine, they don't want war
 - Enjoy living in their country, much like you and I
- Talk about the Russian people who have protested in Russia against the war. Explain how many of them have been arrested and risked their lives doing this because their country does not allow its people the freedom to protest peacefully if it goes against government decisions. This is in contrast to the British values we have in our country
- Remind them it is not okay to say 'I don't like Russia/Russians' but instead encourage your child to think about this in terms of 'I don't like what the Russian army is doing'
